BACK TO SCHOOL PRAYER (For Every Mom)

Dear Heavenly Father,

Teach me to number my days.

Teach me to count the joy in the delightful and the disgusting,
to count the beauty in the hard and the happy.

Teach me to hold on – and to let go, but always to lean on You.

Teach me to love them, Lord, the way you love me.

Teach me to rest in your peace, even when I'm standing in chaos.

Teach me to remember your Truth, even when we face lies and loss.

Teach me to keep my eyes on you, God – and to point my girls to you as well.

Teach me to redeem this time, this season, this phase – to remember that you are in this, with me, holding up my arms and holding them, too.

Teach me to be humble and to learn, even as they learn this school year.

Teach me to be strong and to persevere, just as they will press on this year.

Teach me to number my days and give me a heart of wisdom, Lord.

Teach me to love you and to love them every moment,
every day, every season, every year Amen.

KBMI, it may have been a rough morning getting the kids off to school, but you rocked it mom, because you found joy even in the chaos! Way to go!

KBMI, well, the kids made it to school in one piece and they're learning all kinds of stuff.
But, you know what, so are you. I hope you're giving yourself grace to learn new things.

You're gonna miss this! Has anyone ever said that to you? They usually say it after you talk about some parenting lament. I know they mean well but it doesn't help. I know I'm going to miss this someday, but it doesn't mean it's not hard now! How do I respond to that? How do I make sure I'm not squandering these days when the kids are young? How do you talk yourself down off the ledge when parenting is hard. Or how do you respond in grace when people want to give you advice and make you feel like you're doing it all wrong? Call now.

Sorry you never got around to baking all those pies and your $63 bag of apples you picked at the orchard needs to be thrown out.

My kids won't eat the wrinkly apples in the bottom of the fridge and I won't buy more until they're gone.

Tip - next time dehydrate them and make your apple pies... later.

Don't forget the 50 lb box of Georgia Peaches you get every year from the truck.
